Well, well, Miss Abbott will return in two weeks with a superlong chapter. In the meantime, may I offer you a story?

Once upon a time I posted this single panel on DeviantArt:

I called it "He meant a date".

There was no story behind, just a boy who invited his clueless friend.

But then my deviant fellow Olivia (PrincessWanderer) gave them names and some background and they became alive. That's how it started the story of

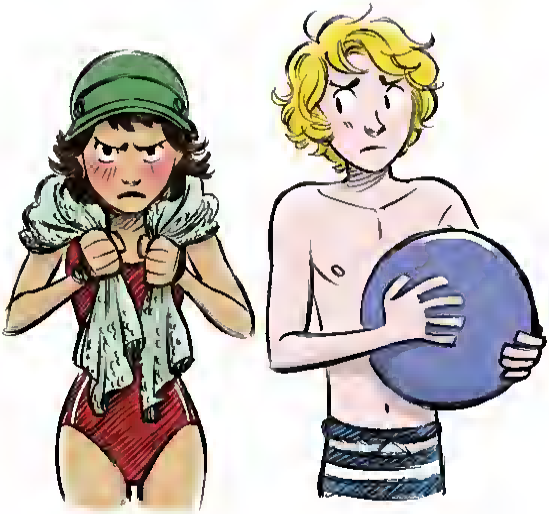
Casey & Sully

Casey realized that her childhood friend had feelings for her in

"The last one"

And she had some trouble to manage that information in

"Freaking out"



Hilarious!

In "I don't love you!" Casey found Sully in the old tree house and asked him directly. He tried to deny everything.

"Of course I don't love you, woman!"

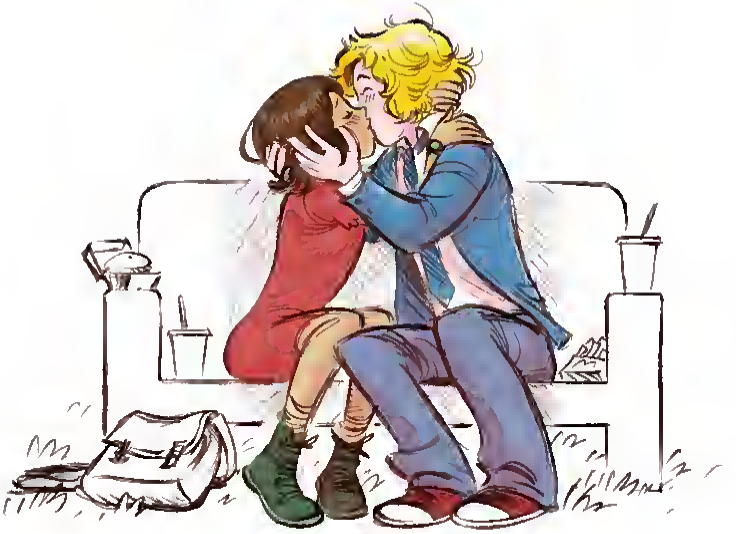
And the story ended with
"Yes, I meant a date".

"I meant... A DATE."

Ready!



(The End)

I posted this story in 2013,
along with the beautiful texts that
Olivia wrote about these two characters.
It became so dear to me that I added some sketches and an alternative scene of the treehouse chapter:

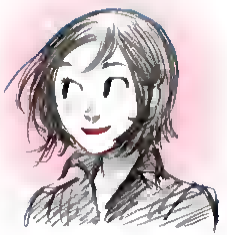
How Casey thinks Sully sees her.



How Sully sees Casey.

What Sully thinks Casey saw

What Casey actually saw.

Say fries!

"Yes, I love you"

And that's all.
I hope you liked this little story.
I'll be back in two weeks with you know what.
